

Suspect Master Spy Sent Code in Drawing

W. K. R. W. Sturzel Rushed From Porto Rico to Georgia Camp

Illustration Full Of Cryptograms

Sketch He Drew in Periodical Had Hieroglyphics Known Only in Berlin

Werner K. R. W. Sturzel, a brilliant young German, a spy who has been operating chiefly in the Caribbean and dangerous enemy aliens with whom the Department of Justice and the Secret Service have had to cope, was taken from this city yesterday to Fort Oglethorpe, Georgia, under an armed guard.

In desperation to convey something of urgent importance to Berlin, he entrusted a confidential mission to a man in the service of the police, and he was arrested immediately. With an overwhelming amount of evidence confronting him in the indictment found by the grand jury, Sturzel broke down and alone admitted that he was a German spy, but a special intelligence agent of the imperial German government assigned to get information to Berlin.

Painting and drawing were among his accomplishments, and by the aid of his talent he managed to create for the "Puerto Rico Ilustrado" the head of an Arabian woman, entitled "TIPO ARABE" which the Porto Rican authorities believed literally teemed with code letters and hieroglyphics decipherable only in Germany or by Sturzel.

Dictator of Venezuela, was ordered out of Trinidad by the British government and immediately returned to Porto Rico, where he had made his home for ten months before the United States declared war on Germany. Sturzel was sent to Porto Rico about the time the European war began and was employed by one of the biggest German business houses on the island. He always had an abundance of money and was a liberal spender. It was the belief of the Secret Service agents who were watching him that he was in the pay of Wilhelmstrasse. Sturzel gave the impression always that his parents were wealthy and that it had been their custom to give generously to the children far away from home.

Breitung, Alleged Plotter, Caught on Rich Woman's Tip

A wealthy woman, it is said, gave the police, by telephone, the tip which resulted in the capture of the man who had eluded numerous agents seeking him as a dangerous alien. Breitung was indicted more than two years ago on a charge of complicity to blow up merchant ships and has been at liberty under $25,000 bail.

WHO CAN READ A SPY'S MESSAGE TO GERMANY?

Puerto Rico Ilustrado

Entered as second class matter March 7, 1914, at the Post office at San Juan, P. R. Published and distributed under permit (No. 132) authorized by the Act of October 3, 1917, on file at the Post Office of San Juan, Porto Rico.—By order of the President, A. S. Burleson, Postmaster General.

Above is the cover design of the "Puerto Rico Ilustrado," a society journal of San Juan, Porto Rico. The picture, a cryptic head, was drawn by Werner K. R. W. Sturzel, a confessed German spy, taken yesterday for internment at Fort Oglethorpe, Georgia. Sturzel has drawn into the picture marks and images which are supposed to be code letters conveying information to the German government.

Rintelen Again On Trial as Spy

He and 11 Others Charged With Plot to Blow Up Ship

Full of difficulties. His whereabouts was ascertained more than a score of times, but the wily German always managed to slip away. During the last few months the trail has led through Washington, Baltimore, Buffalo, Milwaukee, Detroit and many other large cities.

Assembly Hostile To Shiplacoff's Attack on Press

Speaker Advises Socialist to Behave So Papers Can't Criticize

ALBANY, Jan. 22.—Abraham I. Shiplacoff, leader of the ten Socialists in the Assembly, made a speech in the lower house to-day in which he complained about being mistreated by the press. Assemblyman Martin G. McCue, Democrat, of Manhattan, objected to Shiplacoff's generalizations as insulting. He asked him to be specific.

Appeals to Manufacturers to Play Fair on Garfield Order

Play Fair on Garfield Order

After adjournment Assemblyman George H. Wiltzie, of Cortland, made his way to Shiplacoff. "Did you make that statement about sabotage?" he asked. "I'm not on the stand," replied Shiplacoff.

Advertisement for Weber and Heilbronner overcoats. The ad features the company name in a large, stylized font, followed by the text 'Notwithstanding Rapidly Increasing Prices of All-Wool Overcoatings Announce Beginning Today Their Annual Sale of Fall and Winter Overcoats'. A list of prices for various styles of overcoats is provided, along with information about the store's location and hours.

Advertisement for Richmond Ship Plants. The ad highlights the company's services, including the construction and repair of ships, and mentions the involvement of government workers. It emphasizes the company's commitment to quality and safety in shipbuilding.

Advertisement for The Charm and Purpose of the Hampton Shops. The ad features a detailed illustration of a well-furnished interior room, showcasing various pieces of furniture and decor. The text describes the shops' offerings and their location in the Hampton neighborhood.

Advertisement for Saks & Company fur coats. The ad includes the company name and address (Broadway at 34th Street), followed by a list of fur coats for sale at reduced prices. A small illustration of a woman in a fur coat is included on the right side of the ad.

Advertisement for Socialist Aldermen Assailed For Bitter Attack on Wilson. The ad contains a detailed article about the political actions of socialist aldermen, including their criticism of President Wilson and their stance on various legislative issues.

Reading electric signs by candle light is one of the odd conditions brought about by the war. When the "lightless night" order issued by the Federal Fuel Administrator went into effect in Cincinnati the manager of a theatre contracted for Japanese lanterns, which were hung around the marquis in front of the theatre. Other lanterns were suspended on rods so as to illuminate the electric letters advertising the attraction.—Cincinnati Times-Star.